Shar-Pei

The Shar-Pei, an ancient breed hailing from China, is renowned for its distinctive deep wrinkles and blue-black tongue. These dogs possess a calm and independent temperament, often forming a strong, loyal bond with their family while maintaining a reserved nature around strangers. Recognized by their "hippopotamus" muzzle, small sunken eyes, and high-set tail, Shar-Peis come in a variety of colors including apricot, cream, and blue. They require early socialization and training to manage their strong-willed nature. With a history dating back over 2,000 years, the Shar-Pei was originally bred for hunting and later became a symbol of Chinese aristocracy before facing near extinction in the 20th century. Thanks to dedicated breeding efforts, the Shar-Pei has experienced a resurgence and continues to be a cherished companion for those who appreciate the breed's unique characteristics and history.
